

Oddjobs

“Hot Fuzz meets Stranger Things in a workplace action-comedy where getting things wrong might mean the end of the world.”

Summary: Demonic gods are going to devour our world and plunge humanity into an endless hell. But there’s no need to get all emotional about it though, and there’s certainly no mileage in panicking the general population by telling them that monsters are real. The consular mission to the Venislarn are the god appeasers and the end of life carers for an oblivious planet. It may be the end of the world as we know it but there are procedures and policies in place and everything needs to be correctly filed and accounted for.

Morag Murray

(dream cast: Karen Gillan) is fiercely Scottish and never one to admit she’s wrong. After killing a minor demon in self-defence and being marked for sacrifice, she is hurriedly transferred from Edinburgh to the Birmingham office. She soon discovers that she’s still a dead-woman-walking and being used as bait to draw out a shapeshifting god loose in the city.

Nina Seth (dream cast: Rhianne Barreto) is young, headstrong, says ‘YOLO’ more than is wise and refuses to learn about anything that happened before the year 2000 because that’s all just ancient history.

Vivian might be critical of Nina’s devil-may-care attitude and lack of deference for her elders and betters but Nina works tirelessly to protect humanity from the horrors that live just a heartbeat away.

Vivian Grey (dream cast: Michelle Gomez) acts like the sternest, most scary head-mistress one could ever meet. She’s critical, a stickler for the rules and has all the emotional warmth of a fridge freezer. She is the one thing in the whole universe that Nina Seth is frightened of. Even alien gods think twice before crossing this woman. She’s one of the good guys.

Rod Campbell

(dream cast: Tom Hardy) is ex-SAS and first fought unholy horrors under the Syrian desert. The fact that he survived was the only qualification he needed to be snapped up by the consular mission in England. Rod takes each day as it comes and gets through life by cherishing small pleasures, like beer, curry and impractical spy gadgets.

There are five books in the complete Oddjobs series which culminates in the much-advertised END OF THE WORLD (don’t worry, it has a happy ending). On the way our government workers work tirelessly and thanklessly to stop alien fraudsters, demonic terrorists, renegade magicians and dimension hopping criminals.
